Marriage Banns

St. Francis Xavier Church

Laura Kitchie and
Nico Giokaris-Bann III

Dear Friends,

Rejoice. Pray. Give thanks. From today's second reading Saint Paul gives a great threefold command, along with some other great suggestions for living. One of my favorite suggestions for living from the letter to the Thessalonians instructs, "Test everything. Retain what is good and refrain from every kind of evil."

This weekend we celebrate the third Sunday of Advent, one that we call Gaudete Sunday, and twelve days from Sunday we will mark the birth of the Savior. Advent allows us to prepare for Christ's coming into our lives, hearts and homes. Today we joyfully acknowledge that Christ has come and is coming. As we do so, it serves us well to think about the three commands: rejoice, pray, and give thanks.

Rejoice. A joyful (rejoicing) Christian attracts. As those who are called by virtue of our baptism to be bearers of the light of Christ to our troubled world, we must allow our joy to be seen. Why, in fact, did Paul tell the Thessalonians to rejoice? Probably for the same reason our Holy Father speaks so often about joy. The title of his first encyclical says it all: The Joy of the Gospel. The Good news of Jesus Christ, who came to us as a little child born in a manger, lived and died according to his loving father's plan, and rose from the dead and ascended into heaven, demands joy.

A number of years ago, I attended the "Who Will Fill These Shoes" vocation conference in Mundelein. when then Father Robert Barron (now auxiliary bishop of Los Angeles) spoke to a group of priests, seminarians, and potential seminarians about "having the heart of a shepherd." In his talk, he stressed the importance of refraining from finger pointing and finger wagging and replacing those with welcoming and attracting.

Without doubt joy attracts. So many people visiting Saints JFX comment on the sense of joy they feel here. You have added to that joy and your joy has attracted others. Keep it up. Think of your own reasons to be joyful and let others know that you are joyful and tell them of the cause of your joy. I still remember Cardinal Dolan's comment: "The cause of my joy is the Cross." He certainly exudes joy and he tells the world why. We can do the same.

Pray. This one word command might sound too obvious. But sometimes amidst our busy lives, prayer can be the last thing remembered or the first thing thrown aside. Looking at the Sacred Scriptures, we see that great things happen only when prayer surrounds them. Even Jesus, the God man, prays before any great event in the Gospels. Before he calls his disciples, before he heals, before he multiplies the loaves and the fish, Jesus prays. If he sees the need for it and demonstrates his reliance on it, so can we make it a part of everything we do, big and small.

As you live in the home, pray. In the morning, offer your day to the Lord in prayer. Before meals, thank God for what you have in prayer. At the end of your day, examine your conscience and seek the Lord's mercy in prayer. At work or at school, pray that the guidance of the Holy Spirit be yours. Often quoted and debated, a line I like and truly believe asserts, "Prayer changes things." Let's let prayer change us and our world. Pray!

Give thanks. An attitude of gratitude wins. As we think of our reasons to be joyful, that thinking inevitably leads to thanksgiving. I am thankful because I am joyful. During this season of Advent – or pre-Christmas – as the retailers would have it, we often get caught up thinking, whether we are eight or eighty, about what we want for Christmas. Some even make lists. Those thoughts and lists get in the way of another perspective: looking at what we have and thanking God for the many, many blessings that are ours.

For what are you most grateful during this season? Do you articulate that gratitude in prayer to God or to the givers of your gifts? Think about how often you say thank you each day. I know I am grateful that Cardinal Cupich sent me to Wilmette nearly two years ago. I'm grateful for the guidance of the Holy Spirit and the Stewardship of so many of you. I thank God for my very supportive family and large group of friends. I'm most grateful today for you!

Peace,

PS Please plan to join us at one of our many Christmas Eve and Christmas Day Masses. We are requesting that no matter what Mass you choose to attend this Christmas, you sign up. Even the car Masses (just for Christmas Eve and Day) require a sign up so that we can plan the liturgies accordingly.
