Staff Guest Columnist:, Deacon Curt Robey

Dear Friends,

Solitude...The first Sunday of every Lenten season opens with the story of Christ going into the desert. All four Gospel writers include this story in their Gospels. Why? To remind us as Mark did today: "The kingdom of God is at hand. Repent and believe in the Gospel." We, like Christ, are asked to reflect on God's plan for us.

The Spirit drives Christ to the desert, a place of solitude. There, Christ will be tested by the devil, testing his will to remain committed to God's plan. A metaphor for you and me. Lent challenges us to confront our demons – sins - that separate us from a deeper relationship with Christ. But how to find the quiet offered by the desert in this wintry, Midwestern location? Some suggestions follow.

One way is using a daily Lenten reflection guide. A generous parishioner has donated the Magnificat Daily Lent Reflection book to our Parish and both Saints JFX campuses have numerous copies in the back of Church. If you aren't attending Church, a copy is available for pick up at either Parish Office with a phone call in advance.

If reading a daily reflection doesn't appeal, consider the free Lenten retreat offered by the IPS Scripture School. There are three different meeting days to learn more about the passion story of Jesus over five sessions. Best of all – it's FREE to Saints JFX parishioners. Details are on the Parish website at [Special Events: Lenten Retreat \(signupgenius.com\)](http://Special Events: Lenten Retreat (signupgenius.com)).

Or use an Internet search with "Catholic Lenten Reflections 2021" and find a program, a book, or a daily reflection aid online. The point is: you and I are being driven by the Spirit to the desert toward finding solitude and reflecting on what keeps us from a closer relationship with God. This year - unlike any year we've encountered given the pandemic – is a time to commit. As we heard today: The kingdom of God is at hand. Repent and believe in the Gospel.

This Date in the American Catholic Church... February 21st holds special significance for Black Catholics in the United States. Baltimore, Maryland is the site of this historical event that has some things in common with the parish of Saints JFX.

Among the earliest European settlers to Maryland, arriving on a boat in 1634 named the Ark and Dove (nicely fits today's First Reading from Genesis about Noah), were 100 Catholics, including two priests and a Black Catholic servant. Maryland's historical tolerance of faiths beckoned Catholics not only from Europe, but Black Catholics from French colonies in the Caribbean.

A nucleus of Black Catholics – from Haiti – immigrated to Baltimore in 1795 and set up a congregation with the help of French priests who had recently arrived to America, fleeing the French Revolution. Over the next sixty plus years, the congregation grew and moved among various church basements seeking a place to worship. The first Black Catholic women's order, the Oblate Sisters of Providence, was formed in Baltimore. This order's mission was educating the children of the Black congregation. Along the way, the Black congregation was aided by St. John Neumann when the Baltimore Diocese withheld resources.

In 1860, the new Bishop of Baltimore asked the Jesuits to serve the needs of the Black congregation. Meeting in the larger basement space of St. Ignatius Church, the congregation's growth continued. The Jesuits named this new place of worship St. Peter Claver, the Jesuit priest known as the patron saint of slaves.

In 1862 a Congregational Church in Baltimore came up for sale. The Jesuits purchased the Church and on February 21, 1863 the first Black Catholic church in America was dedicated. The work of this Church continues to the present day.

What does this parish in Baltimore have in common with our parish in Wilmette besides being a place of Catholic worship? For one, a name: St. Francis Xavier. Two, a church founded by immigrants – Saint Joseph served the German settlers in what would become Wilmette. Three, people who hear the same Mass on Sunday receive the true Body of Christ and our loved by the same God. Truly Catholic.

Peace,

Deacon Curt Robey

Are you looking for a way to give alms this lent?

Sr. Joyce Shanabarger, a member of the parish's extended family, and the Sisters of Christian Charity continue their advocacy at Bethany House. Bethany House, located in Chicago's Hyde Park neighborhood, is a home for immigrant women who turn 18 and have nowhere to live.

We would love to gift Bethany House with donations from our Saints JFX families to help their ministry.

You can donate online via GiveCentral by selecting Ash Wednesday (Lenten Almsgiving) at www.givecentral.org/location/51/allevents.

We also welcome cash or check donations sent to the SFX parish office or St. Joseph rectory office.
